- 1: an organization that provides instruction:
- 2: an institution for the teaching of teachers?

That's correct. Yeshiva Darchei Noam is not only an institution for the education of students, but an institution for the education of our teachers. Both our General Studies and Kodesh staff are engaged in year-long professional education cohorts here in school where they learn and grow together as they sharpen their skills and keep up with the latest advancements in education.

Twice monthly, the General Studies staff give up their Friday mornings, rearranging their schedule to participate in a bi-weekly learning cohort led by Mrs. Mindy Lidsky. Together, Mrs. Lidsky and the members of the General Studies department review and study the latest advances in education along with the longstanding practices of the best of the teaching profession. Each session is filled with valuable insight and information with practical methods and practices that teachers implement in their own classrooms the very next day!

The kodesh department has set aside two Sunday mornings each month for a unique and valuable collaborative that takes advantage of the incredible talents and abilities of our very own rebbeim. Each session, a different rebbe presents to his colleagues on a significant theme in chinuch thereby spreading the talent in each classroom to every classroom. This past

Sunday, Rabbi Spivak, whose ability to connect with his fifth grade students on their level is legendary, shared with the staff some of his personal philosophy and experience on communicating and connecting with talmidim. Both the Kodesh and General Studies learning collaboratives highlight the greatness of our staff at YDN and underscore what makes them so phenomenal. Despite how good they are at what they do, our staff strives to constantly grow and advance so that their students may grow and advance.

Fifth Grade's School Election

Written by fifth grader, Shlomo Gottlieb
 On Tuesday, the fifth grade class held a presidential election for our school to vote. The fifth grade split into groups of four. Each person had an assignment either to be Donald Trump or Hillary Clinton. Every group went to a different class. They spoke about the candidates and then the kids voted. Teachers also voted. Trump won in YDN. We would like to thank Mrs. Giordano, Ms. Giordano, and the entire fifth grade class for putting their time and effort to organize this election.

Segol Eggs

To help the Pre 1a talmidim remember the Segol sound "eh", Morah told a funny story about a boy who needed to bring his mommy three EGGS but couldn't remember what he needed.

To further help the boys to reinforce this concept the pre 1a kinderlech were split up into teams of three and each team decorated their own segol, three real (hard boiled!) eggs.
