פרשת ויצא

A Different Voice

ויקח מאבני המקום וישם מראשתיו וישכב במקום ההוא

Taking one of the stones of that place, he put it under his head and lay down in that place.

וישכב במקום ההוא. לישון מעוט; באותו מקום שכב אָבֶל י"ד שָׁנִים נִשְׁמַשׁ בְּבֵית עֶבֶר לֹא שָׁכַב בְּלֵילָה, שֶׁהָיָה עוֹסֵק בְּתוֹרָה

The word ההוא, that, has a limitative force: in that place he lay down to sleep, but during the previous fourteen years when he sat under his teachers in the School of Ever he never slept at night for he was incessantly engaged in the study of the Torah

-Rashi

When I was a boy of 14, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be 21, I was astonished at how much the old man had learned in seven years.

- Mark Twain

We are all familiar with the midrash, cited by Rashi, that Yaakov's journey to Charan was interrupted by a fourteen-year stopover in in the beis medrash of Ever. Rashi notes that the first time that Yaakov lay down to rest was when he reached this place, but in the fourteen prior years, in the beis Ever, Yaakov never lay down to rest at night as he was engrossed in Torah study.

Rav Yaakov Kaminetsky, in the Emes L'Yaakov, questions the need for Yaakov to spend time studying in the beis medrash of Shem and Ever. He notes that until the age of 15, Yaakov had the privilege of learning at the feet of his illustrious grandfather, Avrohom Avinu and beyond that, he spent the next 51 years learning directly from the gadol hador, Yitzchok Avinu. If so, what more could Yaakov possibly expect to gain from the school of Ever?

To bolster Rav Yaakov's question, it seems from Rashi and the midrash that during the years of study in his father's and grandfather's houses Yaakov did allow himself to lie down to sleep at night without concern for missing out on some learning. It was only in the house of Ever that Yaakov wouldn't waste a minute on sleep!

Rav Yaakov offers a beautiful explanation concerning the difference between and relevance to Yaakov of Ever's Torah as compared to that of Avrohom and Yitzchok. I would like to offer a simpler perspective that is important for and common to all parents.

Many children are raised in homes that pride themselves on their traditions, their scholarship and their mesorah. Yet, oftentimes, children who are raised in those homes will come back from yeshiva having picked up a different way of doing things or an alternative point of view or perspective from their rebbe or their Rosh Yeshiva. That's often when the fireworks start.

Parents frequently feel hurt and insulted that the children have forsaken their mesorah for another. They are hurt and insulted when children challenge the way that parents do things and take on added stringencies not practiced in the parents' home. They may even respond by challenging or undermining the rebbe or Rosh Yeshiva before their child, declaring the rebbe to be wrong.

What parents fail to grasp in those circumstances is just how fortunate they are. All children naturally feel the need to assert their independence. All children need to blaze their own path and find their own way. In short, rebellion is a natural part of growing up.

There are many ways in which a child can rebel. Most of them are scary. If the child's rebellion and assertion of independence takes the form of finding his own path through his rebbe and taking on new stringencies not found in the home, that is a rather benign and fortunate rebellion for him to mount.

Even if you are Yaakov Avinu, and you grow up in the house of Avrohom and Yitzchok, you too need to blaze your own trail. You need to form your own identity, and that is why Yaakov takes a fourteen year, intensive detour to the beis medrash of Ever.

Your child, at fourteen may think you are ignorant and his rebbe or Rosh Yeshiva is a genius. But, be patient with him, give him space to find himself, and he too will be amazed at how much you learn in the seven years until he turns 21.
