פרשת נצבים

כִּי אֶת-אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁנֹוּ פֹה עִמָּנוּ עִמַּד הַיּוֹם לִפְנֵי ה' אֱלֹ-ינוּ וְאֶת אֲשֶׁר אֵינָנוּ פֹה עִמָּנוּ הַיּוֹם:

but both with those who are standing here with us this day before the L-RD our G-d and with those who are not with us here this day.

וְאֵת אֲשֶׁר אֵינָנוּ פֹה. וְאֶף עִם דּוֹרוֹת הָעָתִידִים לְהֵיוֹת:

i.e. with the generations that will be in future

- Rashi

Each day of our lives we make deposits in the memory banks of our children.

- Charles R. Swindoll

There is a fabulous story that is told about Rav Shlomo Heiman, the great Rosh Yeshiva of Torah Vodaas. Rav Heiman was known for his brilliant shiurim which he related with boundless energy and enthusiasm. One particular winter day, a blizzard crippled New York City and most of the talmidim could not make it to yeshiva. Nevertheless, the Rosh HaYeshiva decided to proceed with his regular shiur which he delivered to the handful of young men who had managed to make it in to yeshiva that day. Rav Heiman presented the shiur with the same fire, energy, and enthusiasm as he did every other day to a full room of talmidim. One of the young men there asked Rav Heiman how and why he could be equally excited to deliver a shiur to five boys as to 100. Rav Heiman answered "when I give shiur, I am not speaking to the people in the room alone. I am speaking to their children and grandchildren until the end of time! How can I not be excited?"

Rav Heiman's response is an insight into the mind of an incredible rebbe with a broad view of the world and his role. It is also a vital insight into how we should approach our role as parents. When we raise our young children we are actually raising the parents of the next generation. How we conduct ourselves with our children will have a significant impact on how they conduct themselves with their children, and the pattern will continue down the line. If we view our role not just as parents, but as parenting educators, how different would our parenting interactions look?

Moshe Rabbeinu was fully cognizant of this reality as he delivered his final words to the Jewish people. He recognized that his message would echo throughout time, and would be felt by those not yet born in lands not yet known. Moshe understood that the way that he spoke to the people would become the way that they would speak to their children, and, at that critical moment, the future of all of Jewry lay in his hand.

Consider yourself in the midst of a challenging parenting moment, but instead of that moment taking place in the privacy of your home, it's being played out in front of an audience of thousands who are tuned in to watch a demonstration of proper parenting methods. How might you act different? How carefully would you measure your words and your actions?

Now, consider that every one of your parenting moments has an audience of hundreds, if not thousands. You have Rav Shlomo Heiman's snow day audience, not of talmidim, but of your children, their children and their children's children for all time. Of course, if you get it wrong, there is always hope that they can unlearn the mistakes you have taught them and learn how to do it the right way. But, isn't it our job as parents to teach them the right way to begin with?
